AYURVEDA

The art of good living

is one of the oldest natural medicine systems passed down by man, a great gift from India to the world.

The word Ayurveda is made up of the words ayu - life - and veda - knowledge - and it thus means 'knowledge of life' or 'the art of living well'.

In addition to medical sciences, it encompasses elements of philosophy, art and disciplines and offers a complete vision of life teaching us the true essence of human beings and their environments and how to maintain a balance between humans and the universe.

Ayurveda distinguishes between three different life energies (Tridosha), each of which has a different main body location and specific function: Vata, Pitta and Kapha.

Normal Dosha equilibrium corresponds to a healthy state while an imbalance in one of more of these causes illness. Lifestyle, adapting to different seasons, diet and contact with nature are all very important in maintaining Dosha balance and thus health.

Massage also serves to balance Doshas, the main biological principles underlying all human beings, eliminating Aama, physical and mental toxins to generate a positive emotional flow and raise the spirits.

Massage is not only therapeutic but also preventative in the sense that it is a way of interpreting, taking on board and modifying some of the body's messages, slowing down ageing, improving resistance to stress, calming the mind, strengthening the immune system and the body's ability to heal itself, it helps to resolve conditions linked to insomnia, depression, fatigue, the menstrual cycle, digestion and contractions in the spinal column.
